

MODEST HOME WILL BE KEPT BY COOLIDGES

(Associated Press)

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 6.—In the first interview he has given since he left the White House, Calvin Coolidge today made it known that he has not been a private citizen long enough to tell how it seems.

Surrounded by a dozen newspapermen and women in the office where he practiced law before he went into the public service, he was pelted with questions about his future plans and his feelings now that he is free from the burden of governmental cares.

The former President submitted to the interview with a friendly understanding that it would be governed by the same conditions which prevailed at his meeting with the correspondents.

to the white house—that he was not to be quoted. During the interview Mr. Coolidge was seated at his old desk in his office in the Masonic Building and smoked a cigar held in an Ivory holder.

He was frankly happy that he could settle down as a private citizen for the first time in thirty years. He intends to keep himself as far removed from public attention as possible. He has no definite plans for the future, except for the writing of a series of autobiographical sketches for which he is now under contract.

For the present, at least, he will remain in Northampton, although he has said that, when he will make his permanent home, he will make it in the city of his birth. He does not plan to renege in the practice of law. As long as he does live here he will continue to reside in the modest house in Massasoit Street. He is greatly attached to that house because it was there that his sons were born.

One of the greatest relics Mr. Coolidge has looked forward to on becoming a plain citizen is to get away from speculating in Plymouth. Although he did not mind being there with the maple sugar season at hand. If he does not leave, however, he will see America first, and does not contemplate a trip to Europe.

Although Mr. Coolidge at present has no need of any repairs, he expects that he will order a new pair of shoes before long at the shop of James Lucy, shoe cobbler and philosopher, who has been his friend.
