

Janet Blair to Star In Musical Comedy

"Around the World with Nellie Bly," an original musical comedy starring Janet Blair in the title role, will be colorcast on NBC at 9 tonight. Cornel Wilde will have the top supporting role.

The book for the show is based on the real-life story of Nellie Bly, the world's first "bigtime woman newspaper reporter" and top byline columnist on the New York World in the 1890s. Specifically, the storyline is based on the crowning stunt of Nellie's spectacular career—her effort to circle the globe alone in less time than novelist Jules Verne set forth in the era's best-seller, "Around the World in Eighty Days."

Author of the teleplay is Sig Herzog, who wrote the Broadway version of the hit musical, "Bloomer Girl."

Cornel Wilde has been cast as reporter Steve Roberts, Nellie's chief rival on the World's chief competitor, the New York Sun.

Twenty-one character players—in some cases known better by faces than names—have been signed for vignette hits in "Around the World With Nellie Bly."

With each listing approximately 100 motion picture credits, the 21 players are Jeanne Cowan, Addison Richards, Jack La Rue, Patsy Kelly, Sig Ruman, John Quisen, Lyle Talbot, William Bakewell, Eddie Quilna, Margaret Dumont, Esther Dale, Jimmy Conlin, Iris Adrian, Pierre Watkins, John Harmon, Irving Bacon, Almira Sessions, Dick Elliott, Tom Kennedy, Grady Sutton and Ralph Sanford.
