

KNIFE IN CAMDEN OFFICIAL'S NECK

Building Inspector William Steinmetz Killed Himself in Club House

Left Trail of Blood and Body Was Found Under Porch by Policemen

WILLIAM T. STEINMETZ,

Camden's Building Inspector, who committed suicide at a Republican club house early yesterday morning.

Within three hours after he had been chosen for a third term as building inspector at a caucus of members of Camden City Council, William T. Steinmetz stuck the blade of his penknife in his jugular vein at the headquarters of the Fifth Ward Republican Club, 260 Mt.
Vernon street, early yesterday morning, and was found dead just before daylight.

The flow of blood must have restored his senses, as indicated by saturated handkerchiefs and a partially filled wash basin in the bath room. Staggering down the steps, indicated by the trail of blood, Steinmetz opened a rear door and went out into the yard, falling with his body partially under the side porch.

NEIGHBORS AROUSED.

As the City Hall clock struck two several neighbors were awakened by cries for help and moans, and one woman insists she heard the man say "Oh, Rosella!" The neighbors went to the front windows, but nothing could be seen except the brilliantly lighted rooms in the club house, and they all went back to bed.

Shortly before 7 o'clock Policeman William Harvey went into the yard to open the rear door so that plumbers could make repairs, and he came across the body of his friend. With Coroner Fithian came several policemen. The Coroner, after an investigation, gave a certificate of death from suicide. The body was taken to his late home at 1015 South Second street.

WIFE DIED IN FEBRUARY.

Last February Mr. Steinmetz's wife, Rosella, died, and since then he had been subject to fits of despondency that made his relatives and friends apprehensive.
He spent the early part of Friday evening at the club house, going from there to the City Hall, where the Councilmanic caucus was in session. He seemed in good health and spirits. About midnight he met Adam T. Davis, a friend, at Broadway and Chestnut street, and after a brief chat he went towards home.

Mr. Steinmetz, who is survived by a sister and three brothers, was a member of Ionic Lodge of Masons, Legion of Honor, Fifth Ward Republican Club, Back End Club and several other organizations.
