terday from a cancerous disease of the throat. Mr. Waldon was removed to the hospital last Saturday from his home, 314 Vine street. Camden. Mr. Waldon was 52 years of age, and was a resident of Camden for over thirty years. He was prominent in Republican circles. After serving as a fireman for several years he was appointed to office several years he was appointed to under Mayor Pratt. When the Democratic Police Commission came into power he resigned and became a detective for the Penusylvania Railroad. For the past ser-

CAMDEN POLITICIAN DEAD
Thomas A. Walton Succumbs to Discase of the Throat Thomas A. Walton, chairman of the Camden County Board of Elections, died at the German Hospital, Philadelphis, yes-eral veats he was a special policeman on the Philadelphia side of the Ierry. He was a member of the Camden and the First Ward Republican Clubs. A widow and four sons survive him.

The duesas which caused the death of Mr. Walton is one of the most peculiar with which physicians have to cope. If was known as acute lymphatic leukaria, and as far as melical records show there have been only even similar cases in the part country. Mr. Walton's case sorely puzzled his first attendant, who was a homeopathic first attendant, who was a homeopathic physician, and he promptly called into concultation a Philadelphian, who in turn summoned a specialist. The case continued to be a puzzle, and Mr. Walton was removed to the German Hospital, where the X-ray revealed in part the source of the disease.

The tonsils of the deceased will be removed for microscopic examination, and physicians hope to gain thereby a better knowledge of the disease.
