WOODWARD'S TRIAL TODAY

Camden Lad Accused of Killing Coffin and Jennings.

of their destination. After being missed for twenty-four hours, search was instituted and four days afterward their dead bodies were found in a field near Haddon Heights, six miles from Camden.

Today Paul Woodward, who was seen with the boys in the neighborhood of the scene of their death, the evening before, was placed on trial charged with the murder of John Coffin.

After the formal preliminaries the work of empanelling the jury from the special venire of forty-eight citizens special venire of forty-eight citizens was begun. There was an unsual number of jurors who could not change their convictions formed from newspaper reading, and the result was the panel was exhausted with only ten men in the box.